My views of technology have become a bit more cynical from this class. A lot of this comes from learning a great deal more about the dark web and all of the messed up stuff on it. Along with how easy it is to access. I did learn a lot of helpful tips that I needed to use in order to keep my personal info much more secure from hacking. Although in the end this class helped me decide that even though I do enjoy messing around with computers and am already my family and friends IT guy, I should just keep IT as more of a hobby. Since a career in IT doesn't seem as personally exciting as it did a few months ago. Especially when I compare it to certain other business ventures that are currently staring me in the face right now.
